Partner Liaison: David Stern, Director and Professor of Education

The Career Academy Support Network (CASN), housed within the Graduate School of Education at UC-Berkeley, supports the development and improvement of career academies. CASN conducts research on career academies and other issues related to the transformation of traditional high school design and curriculum. CASN also works directly with a variety of high schools and districts around the country and disseminates research findings and resources through its clearinghouse of materials, its national directory of academies and its web-based guide for career academies.
