Consortium on Chicago School Research

Partner Liaison: Sue Spote, Senior Research Analyst

www.consortium-chicago.org

The Consortium on Chicago School Research is an independent federation of organizations that conducts research on a wide variety of issues related to Chicago’s public schools and public school reforms. The Consortium supplies data, analysis and technical assistance to other researchers, including its research framework entitled the Model of Essential Supports for Student Learning. The Consortium has recently published a new series on Chicago’s high school that offers a school-by-school analysis of test scores, drop out rates and enrollment changes.
