Partner Liaison: Adria Steinberg, Program Director

Jobs for the Future (JFF) partners with leaders in education, business, government and communities to strengthen educational and career opportunities and services for youth. The primary work of JFF is to conduct research and advocate for public policies and programs that increase the capacity of schools and communities to support career and college transitions and greater economic opportunities for youth. JFF recently received a major grant to serve as the lead coordinator and policy advocate on the Early College High Schools Initiative funded by Gates and Kellogg. As part of this, JFF provides support and technical assistance to local schools.
